

EU General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR)

GDPR is a change in data privacy regulation which defines a broad set of rights and principles governing the protection and use of EU citizens' data, which comes into force on 25th May 2018.

The three main elements of this are:

1. Consent must be given for data processing, and the way the data will be used must be stated in a way that is easy for the citizen to understand.

Personal details, supplied by members when joining the International Turaco Society (ITS) or renewing their subscription, are saved by the Chairman, who is also the Membership Secretary, Treasurer and Webmaster, so that he can:

- keep a record of current membership numbers and locations around the world
- post out copies of magazines and/or send pdf versions of the magazine to paid-up members
- add personal details to the members' section of the ITS website, only if asked to do so by the member concerned
- maintain records of all financial details related to the ITS.

2. Organizations must clearly state what data is being processed, how it is being processed and with what other organizations the data might be shared.

Members' information held by the Chairman on his own personal computer, (automatically backed up to his own password protected Dropbox folder in case of hard disc failure):

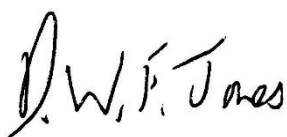

- Name
- Postal address
- Telephone number (if supplied)
- E-mail address (if supplied)
- When (date), how much (pound sterling) and how (PayPal, bank cheque, cash or bank payment) subscriptions were paid.

This information might be seen by other committee members of the ITS if this would help with the smooth running of the society, but will not be shown to other members, or to any person or organization outside the ITS. Contact details of a member may be passed to someone else so that they can communicate with each other, but only at the request of the member concerned. An example of this is when members advertise their turacos for sale on the ITS website.

3. Citizens have a right to be forgotten. That is, they can request that all copies of their data be deleted. They also have a right to be easily able to transfer their data from one organization to another.

Members can resign from the ITS at any time by informing the Chairman / Membership Secretary. They will then be removed from the members' list and their personal details will be deleted.

The ITS does not hold any personal data which members could transfer to any other organization.

David Jones - Chairman ITS
